FACTSHEET

IOC INTEGRITY BETTING INTELLIGENCE SYSTEM (IBIS)

DECEMBER 2014

AIMS OF IBIS

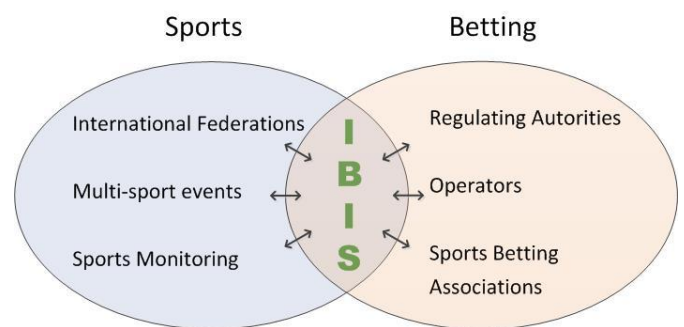

- To safeguard sports from any negative influence connected to sports betting
- To support International Federations (IFs) and organisers of multisport events in the fight for clean competitions and clean athletes, by providing them with alerts and intelligence via a centralised mechanism for exchange of information
- To create a framework for transparency, confidentiality and trust between all stakeholders

What does IBIS do?

- IBIS collects and distributes information and intelligence related to sports betting for use by all stakeholders of the Olympic Movement.
- As an IT platform, IBIS enables communication between all partners on the sports side and the different entities involved in sports betting.
- IBIS is not a betting-data provider or a monitoring system. Data monitoring is already performed by national regulators under the framework of national legislation and by operators to safeguard their respective business models.
- IBIS is provided free of charge to IFs. The IOC covers the technological costs of the platform.
- IBIS is based on a network of Memorandum of Understanding signed by the IOC and the different stakeholders - betting regulators, betting operators and IFs.

- IBIS will be the contact point for the network of the Convention of the Council of Europe.

Reciprocal responsibilities

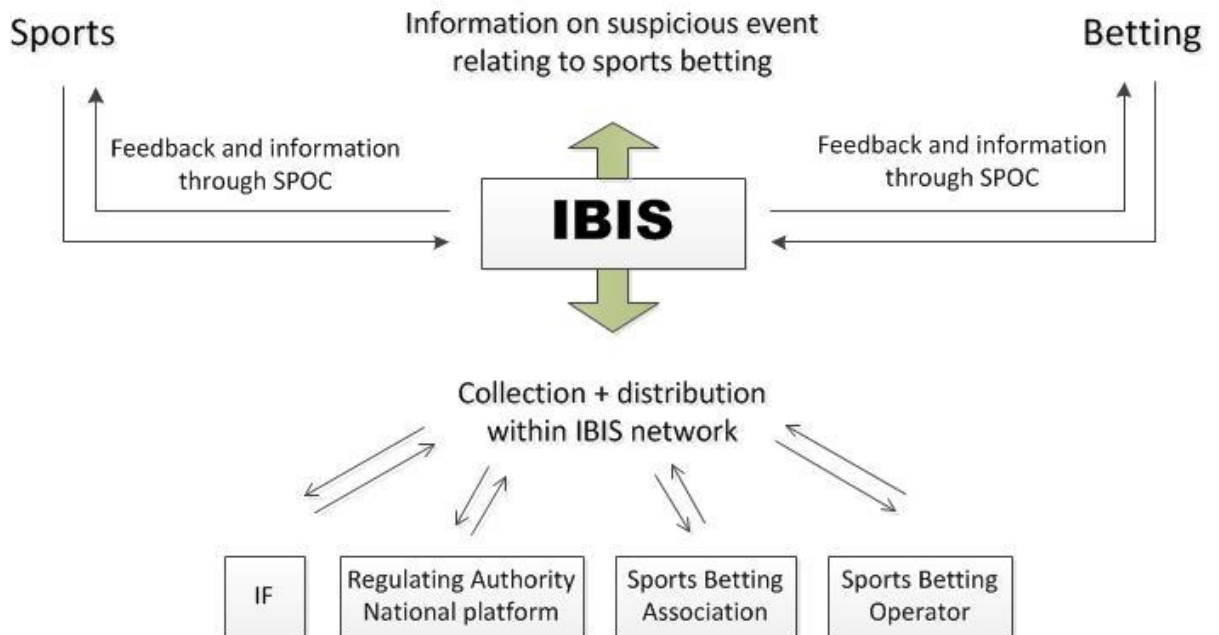

- The regulators and operators undertake to pass on all alerts and relevant information on potential manipulation connected to sports betting on the events chosen run by each IF.
- The IOC undertakes to aggregate and analyse the information received before passing it on to the IFs concerned.
- During the Olympic Games, the IOC is responsible for the application of rules and sanctions.
- In between editions of the Olympic Games, the IFs are responsible for deciding, pursuant to their own rules and regulations, how to deal with the information: investigation, analysis of the sporting aspect of the competition concerned and the application or non-application of measures and/or sanctions.

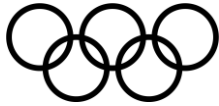

- The IFs undertake to convey the results of their analysis and any action taken to the IOC, who may then pass the information on to the relevant stakeholders at the origin of the alert.
- In the event that an IF suspects one of its events has been jeopardised, the IF may ask IBIS for any information on the betting market.

The IBIS mechanism

- IBIS became operational in January 2014.
- Single points of contact (SPOC) have been established within each partner that signed the MoU.
- A dedicated log-in is required of every SPOC using a secured platform on the IOC's extranet.
