IOC reanalysis programme

Beijing 2008 and London 2012

The protection of clean athletes and the fight against doping are top priorities for the International Olympic Committee (IOC), as outlined in Olympic Agenda 2020, the IOC’s strategic roadmap for the future of the Olympic Movement.

Programme initiated prior the Olympic Games Rio 2016

To provide a level playing field for all clean athletes at the Olympic Games Rio 2016, the IOC put special measures in place, including targeted pre-tests and the reanalysis of stored samples from the Olympic Games Beijing 2008 and London 2012, following an intelligence-gathering process that started in August 2015 – in consultation with WADA and International Federations (IFs).

The additional analyses on samples collected during the Olympic Games Beijing 2008 and London 2012 were performed with improved analytical methods, in order to possibly detect prohibited substances that could not be identified by the analysis performed at the time of these editions of the Olympic Games.

For reference, some reanalysis of the stored samples of Beijing 2008 and London 2012 was already conducted in 2009 and 2015 respectively, leading to the sanctioning of six athletes. The programme for Beijing samples has concluded due to the statute of limitations.

The total number of confirmed Adverse Analytical Findings (AAFs) by reanalysis in 2016 was announced as 101.

Targeted re-analysis programme

In order to support the investigations of Prof. McLaren and his team, the IOC ordered a number of targeted re-analyses of Russian athletes’ samples during the course of 2016.

In December 2016, the IOC also extended the mandate of the Oswald Commission to examine all samples collected from Russian athletes during the Olympic Games London 2012, following the findings of the completed Independent Person Report.

Details of cases can be given only once each case has been concluded and the athletes in question have been notified of an Anti-Doping Rule Violation (ADRV).
Key figures:

Beijing 2008:
- Number of tests carried out during the Games (27 July-24 August 2008): 4,800
- Number of samples selected for reanalysis (process over as samples stored for 8 years): 1,053
- Number of sanctions issued as of 5 April 2017: 64

London 2012 – Prior Olympic Games Rio 2016:
- Number of tests carried out during the Games (16 July-12 August 2012): 5,000
- Number of samples selected for reanalysis (ongoing process / samples stored for 8 years): 492
- Number of sanctions issued as of 5 April 2017: 41

London 2012 – Targeted reanalyses of Russian athletes in the context of the Independent Person report:
- Number of sanctions issued as of 5 April 2017: 4

Background information:

- The amount of stored urine is limited, so it is not desirable to reanalyse before new tests are developed unless the intelligence for a particular new test in a particular group of athletes means that is worthwhile. This is the case for a number of London samples thanks to the new test for steroids (long-term metabolites).

- New tests for substances other than anabolic steroids may be developed in the next three years – perhaps for Erythropoiesis-Stimulating Agents (ESAs), like EPO, blood transfusions and small peptides (e.g. growth hormone), so unless there is a good reason we want to keep samples until nearer to the eight-year mark.

- For obvious reasons, the exact test distribution plan (TDP) is not divulged as that is useful intelligence for cheaters – the more unpredictable testing is, the more effective the deterrence.

Reallocation of medals

The reallocation of medals is not automatic and is decided by the IOC on a case-by-case basis. If the IOC decides to reallocate the medals, such reallocation takes place only after all remedies of sanctioned athletes/teams have been exhausted (e.g. when all procedures are closed). In such case, the IOC will follow up with the relevant National Olympic Committee, which then notifies the relevant athlete(s) to whom the medals have been reallocated.
